The Uinta Herald has a splendid publication. Mr. Shaffer, the editor, will dictate his time to job work. See Bigelow.

The "Grand Cork Company" gives a very entertaining performance at the U. S. Church last night. A good audience enjoyed, which will be repeated. William Cannon and Louis Berlin who leave the 20th of next month on a two years' mission to England. New Register.

Dr. G. Verner W. A. Richardson has sent remittances of the votes cast at Washington to cover Mr. Frank W. Mondell, who will take his seat as congressman from Wyoming in the 51st Congress.

The author of the Anti-missionary, the Rev. Marcus Daly, entering No. 1, has got to Washington and laid before the legislature, offering immunition a variety of evidence to prove that Mr. Clark, major King No. 2, was recently exonerated by the United States Senate from accusations of malfeasance and excessive bribery. His services chosen in American politics.

He adds that Mr. Clark's certificate of election he referred to in the committee on privileges and elections for an investigation before that gentleman is allowed to take his seat. While it is not improbable that an investigation may be ordered, it is scarcely possible that the Republicans will deny Mr. Clark the right to introduce and publish a document of this nature.

That is not the case unless there is shown to be a conflict in the evidence.

He adds that Mr. Clark's certificate was improperly issued. Mr. Clark received a majority of the votes of the legislature; the governor has certified his election in a proper and lawful manner, and the charge that those votes were purchased with money remains to be proved. It fails of course that Mr. Daly's action will be taken by the Montana legislature who voted for Mr. Clark to remain in private life and enjoy their services—Chicago Record.

LEGISLATIVE SCRAPS.

STATE LAWMAKERS AND ALASKA PHYSICAL EXAMINERS

It is high noon like they do in called toward and afternoon's fully adjourned session, before, under fear of such charges will say and do things which, after a day's sleep, appear to him as though cold. These things occur, not only in the other houses in holding their own legislative halls, where their acts of dignity and character are said and to be. First comes the result of a secret conference and then the do that of short arm pushes and the holding him or the spot of some other's body in somebody's eye. This is the way the House last reports a session in the legislative—

It has all progressed like a race in all running, when it is known Senator F. J. Spofford left up his bill No. 16, on third reading. This is the famous and most notorious.

There was time, said the Legislature, to get it before adjourning.

—Stewart began at once to make things ugly by remarking that Senator Philip had shifted down to the department store bill. He said, a great field. I don't know that a man's name, when he is in the interior, and he changed his opinion during the night. I want to know if he is going to shift on this?

"Don't you ever say that Lagrange that bill?" said Senator Schenckburn, who was in the chair.

"I didn't mean you. I meant the author of this bill," replied Stewart. "It was in his eye that the great fight should be let him to switch on the department store bill, when he fully resolved to support the bill."

"The discussions made me angry but I consider the same," replied Philip.

"Yes," answered Stewart, "and I consider the source of the greatest fight that made him change his eye."

With this Senator Philip began as white as paper and red red.

"When any one makes such statements he simply lies. The senator refuses to grant to his fellow senators the sensations of honor or integrity."

"The senator has no honor or integrity," replied Stewart.

"All I can say in answer to that is that I know of no excuse, and I must leave the senator to his own unworthy conduct," replied Philip.

"I did not speak on the department store bill. From the first I told Senator Parks, McCrory, Atwater and Wheeler that I doubted the merit of the bill."

Senator Philip appealed to Senator Parks to support this statement, but Parks refused to do so. Senators McCrory and Atwater, however, corroborated Philip and the senate adjourned, thinking the trouble was over. Immediately, however, Senator Stewart, with his black house drawn down, strides across the chamber and standing by Philip, who was still seated said:

"You called me a liar and I'm going to clip your nose for it when I catch you out."

"Well, we'll get out right now then," said Philip, who was little and pale but very stiff in the back and determined in spirit.

The last words were spoken low, and few heard them, but Stewart and Philip started out of the chamber at a rapid pace.

The officers of the senate reported the men, and in less than a minute the belligerents were surrounded by two crowds who looked them over.

A number of the older senators insisted that some action shall be taken over the article.
